

More than a dozen of you have expressed an interest in submitting theoretical writing, student work or both for possible inclusion in Good Question!

-Thanks!-

A few have submitted files and many more are valiantly battling deadlines to get work to us. As you know, our goal is to create a book that blends a quality comicform research handbook for kids, excellent exemplars of student research and an array of readings that will guide teachers and researchers in authentic, creative research collaborations with kids. With all of that in mind, communication is more important than time.

-the submission deadline is extended 'till the end of October, 2013-

And... if you need more time (or just want to say hi!), please contact Mike (memme@uvic.ca) or Anna (akirova@ualberta.ca). We will continue to do all we can to gather the essential images and ideas you and your student collaborators have created that can serve as the inspiration for Good Question!

-please feel free to share this-